The Collierville Heraid, in announcing the death of an old Memphis citizen, says: "G. W. Weaver departed this Collierville life on the twenty-ninth instant, at half-past five o'clock in the afternoon, leaving many behind him to mourn his loss. Here and there men were earnestly engaged in conversation in an undertone, with suspicions at the highest pitch that fraud was about to be perpetrated on them. The general inquiry was, 'Have you seen Weaver?' But none had been so fortunate, for G. W. Weaver had collected all the money due him on the job the same afternoon, promising to pay off the hands, and said he wanted to settle with them early, giving some petty excuse. And he had bought a new sult of clothes from S. D. Mangum & Co., went over to Aliec Chapman's restaurant, put them on, and then put his old, or working sult, over them, and made his exit with about one hundred and twenty dollars in his pocket, a new sult of clothes, and a gold watch that he had bought from S. H. Russell, leaving a balance of ten dollars and twenty-live cents unpaid. Weaver is about five feet eight inches high, weighs one hundred and tairty-five pounds, has dark hair, blue eyes, often complains of neuralgia, or pain in his head. We ask the press to hand him around, as he has proven himself to be a fraud. It is thought he will make his way to Louisville or S'. Louis. THE CUSTOMHOUSE.

Dimensions and Character of the Build ing-The Stone, Men and Money. and the Work Being Done.

Work on the Memphis customhouse, on the bluff, opposite Madison street, is being pushed forward as fast as possible by the superintendent, Major G. H. Lease, and his assistant, Mr. W. B. Dunnell. The building will be one hundred and forty-nine feet eight inches by seventy-nine feet two inches in size. The exterior basement story walls are to be of Alabama limestone, obtained from Fossick's quarries, at Dixon's station, on the Memphis and Charleston railroad. The walls, where exposed above the pavements and in the areas on the west side, are of Missouri red granite. The interior walls and piers will be of hard-burnt brick, the contract being awarded to Mr. Charles Jones, of this city. Up to October 1st the sum of seventeen thousand five hundred and ten dollars and sixty-three cents have been expended on the building. This includes all the material used and on the ground, except the granite. Major Lease expects to complete the basement-story by the first of December, up to which time, from the present date, proposals will be invited for the first floor beams and for the materials to compose the superistructure. Tals will be everything up to the roof, but nothing as to the Interior. It is expected to continue the work without cessation or delay, fifty men being constantly employed on the building. Major Lease's object in employing works men is not to show any partiality or favoritism, but to be governed solely by strict business rules. He has at work all the stone-massons that he can procure in Memphis, but needs four for five more course in Memphis, but needs four for five more course need apply. Mr. Lease will not employ any but competent mechanics, and none others need apply. The building is to be three stories above the basement, which will be used for heating purposes and the storage of bonded goods. The postoffice will occupy the first story, which will be ample in size and convenient in arrangement. The revenue, marshal, and other offices will be in the second story. The United States courts will occupy the third story.

The work is durable and evidently well done. It will compare with any work of the kind done elsewhere, and shows that Major Sease and Mr. Dunnell have given it their careful attention. The gates to the yard are open during the day, and Major Sease invites the public to call at any time to examine the work during its progress, and form an idea of its character and the amount necessary for its completion.

Now, as a matter of law, if these taxes or some of them, levied years ago, were fillegal but voluntarily paid, then they are not recoverable from the city. On the other hand, it is a question of sound policy addressing itself to the wisdom of council, whether or not they would permit these matters to rest, or whether they will reopen the same question in other wards of the city, as well as in the ninth and tenth wards, where some taxes, years ago, were not collected in strict accordance with law, and in this way doubtless adding many thousands to our already heavy debt? Again, even if the taxes were allowed, they could not be used as prayed for, as to do so would violate section 66 of the charter.
